Graviola / Soursop fruit

Graviola, also known as soursop or Brazilian paw paw and is hailed as a wonder herb. Graviola increases T cells. T cells are lymphocytes in the body that kill cancer cells and other damaged cells.

The plant has many "bioactive compounds" and "phytochemicals" that assist the body in fighting disease. The extracts are antibacterial against various pathogens. More importantly, graviola is an "annonaceous acetogenin." In the simplest terms, this means it has antitumorous and antiprotozoal capabilities. Its antitumorous properties are most notable because they assist in shrinking tumors. Graviola extract has many compounds with antioxidant abilities. These include: Tannins, saponins, phytosterols, flavonoids, anthraquinones. Graviola has anti-inflammatory properties that may relieve pain. Graviola may help people regulate their blood sugar if they have diabetes. It helped protect the stomach's mucous lining. It also helped prevent free radical damage to the digestive tract. Graviola is considered an alternative treatment for herpes.
